

FOXROCK STABLES

For twenty-five years, Beth Newman deStanley has made a name for herself in the local equestrian community. She began showing at an early age, and by eight was a member of the Loudoun Hunt. As a young adult, she won numerous hunter championships on the East Coast, including Ladies Hunter Champion at the Washington International Horse Show in 1993. Concurrently, she campaigned jumper prospects up to the Grand Prix level. A champion steeplechase jockey, deStanley captured the Virginia Point-to-Point Ladies Timber Rider title or runner-up seven times between 1993 and 2002.

Now as FoxRock owner and head trainer, deStanley shares her vast knowledge with her clients, and under her direction many students achieve excellence in the show ring and hunt field.

Nestled in the foothills of Western Loudoun County, FoxRock Stables offers both instruction by award winning trainers and state of the art equine accommodations.

Custom tailored lessons address the needs of beginners as well as seasoned equestrians looking to hone their riding skills. Trainer support and trailering are available for both A-rated shows and local venues. For the thrill seeker, foxhunting is scheduled on weekends during the season. Opportunities for leisurely trail rides are available year round.

The stable, grounds and training areas are nothing short of breathtaking. Call today to arrange a personalized tour of this remarkable facility.
